

ILA-USMX JOINT SAFETY COMMITTEE

OSH Circular 2025-07 (01 July 2025)

OSHA Enforcement Activity (CY 2024)

Periodically, the ILA~USMX Joint Safety Committee looks back on our industry's previous year's experience with OSHA. Below, you'll find an empirical snapshot of the agency's Calendar Year 2024 performance within the U.S. marine cargo handling sector as reflected within the agency's management information system (MIS) as of Mid-March 2025:

	CY 2024
Total number of inspections recorded:	92
Total number of inspections with citations issued:	33
Total number of alleged violations of OSHA standards:	55
Total number of "Serious" & "Repeated" alleged violations:	33
Total number of "Other Than Serious" alleged violations:	27
Total unadjusted [proposed] civil penalties:	$416,223.00
Total adjusted [collected/pending] civil penalties:	$242,391.00

Inspections By State/Territory

Alaska:	9	Louisiana:	1	Rhode Island	2
Alabama	1	Maine	1	South Carolina:	2
California:	18	Mississippi:	1	Tennessee:	9
Florida:	8	New Jersey:	1	Texas:	7
Georgia:	4	Ohio	1	Virginia:	3
Hawaii:	1	Oregon:	8	Washington:	9
Kentucky:	2	Pennsylvania:	2	Virgin Islands	2

In review of the historical data it's fairly apparent that OSHA has, in CY 2024, increased the size of its civil penalties somewhat while marginally decreasing its waterfront presence. Furthermore, while we can (and do) rely upon OSHA regulations as a viable benchmark, we should not, as an industry, become reliant upon OSHA to serve as the principal player in our efforts to create and maintain safe workplaces. That is so, with good reason.

While the ILA~USMX Joint Safety Committee clearly understands that workers have a right to file complaints with OSHA about workplace safety and health conditions, all things considered we believe in the principle of keeping our own house in order whenever possible.

Consequently, we urge all industry participants to utilize local resources at your disposal in resolving any perceived workplace safety shortcomings. Work through your stewards and managers. Clearly document your concerns. If that process is disappointing, have the issue raised up to your local port's labor/management joint safety committee. Most of them meet at least quarterly. In the event that a local port joint safety committee cannot resolve the issue, the ILA~USMX Joint Safety Committee is empowered to act in a fair, equitable and responsible manner in curing any impasses.
